WITH THE UNKNOWN DEAD

THERE IS STILL NUMBERED THAT WOMAN IN BLACK.

Keeper Fogarty, at the Morgae, Dees No. Believe She Belonged in the City-She Was Comely, with Soft Brown Hair, a Graceful Figure and a Story That Will Probably Be Buried with Her.

About one hundred people have called at the Morgue during the past two days to look at the body of the unknown woman who swallowed a dose of poison and died in the Compton House, Wednesday night,

A few of the visitors were anxiously search ing for missing wives, sisters, daughters or sweethearts, but the majority were prompted to go there merely by a spirit of morbid curi-

Joe Fogarty, the custodion of the friendless dend, can tell one of the atter class at a glance, and it is seldom that their longing is gratified.

The woman in question registered at the hotel as Mrs. Brown. It may be her right name, as the initials R. C. B. were engraved on a turquoise ring, the only article of jewelry she wore.

Unless the body be recognized by next Tuesday, it will be sent to the Potter's field for burial. Fogarty has had the corpse photographed, and will keep the unfortunate photographed, and will keep the unfortunate woman's clothing, as by these articles she may be identified after she is buried, if not before.

An Evening Wonld reporter visited the Morgue this morning. Following Fogarty he entered the dismal dead-house and passed between long rows of pine boxes. The mournful music of the rain pattering down on the tinned roof seemed in perfect harmony with the general aspect of the place. A side door looking out on the East River admitted more fog than light, and the keeper was obliged to light a lantern before the woman's features could be made out in the rough coffin that contains her remains.

She was evidently a handsome woman, in the prime of life. Her face was rather long, but perfectly proportioned, and the figure the prime of life. Her face was rather long, but perfectly proportioned, and the figure was graceful. The flesh, except on the face and hands, was as smooth and soft as velvet. She had all the outward appearance of a woman in a middle station in life. Her hair was long, soft, and light brown in color. Her eyes were blue.

There is no mark or blemish on the body by which it could be identified. The clothing was of good quality and showed that the woman was a person of refinement. The dress was of heavy black silk, with side plaits of black jet. The waist was made of the same material. The shoes, stockings and underclothing were of the best material. A heavy jacket of blue diagonal cloth was lined with rich white striped satin.

Her bonnet was of brown straw and of the style known as "The Goddess of Liberty."

There was $10.71 in one of those long, stylish pocket books that ladies generally carry, now, a days, but there was nothing else in it. The woman was 5 feet, 8 inches tall, aged about thirty-three, and weighed about 155 pounds.

She probably lived in some adjacent country place, and after leaving her home for some cause came to this city. Here, brooding over her trouble, alone and friendless in this big city, she became melancholy home for some case. I hope and friend-brooding over her trouble, alone and friend-less in this big city, she became melancholy and ended her existence. I hope that she will be identified before I am obliged to send

Sedentary Habita.

Sedentary Habits.

In this age of push and worry the business man and the professional man are alike unable to devote any adequate time to exercise. In the daily round of toil and pleasure no suitable provision is made for that important function, and the result is that men of sedentary babits become subject to many forms of aliments arising from a tornid or sluggish liver. Constipation, sick headache, billionaness and dispepsin are all due to the improper action of the liver. Dr. PERGER'S PLEASANT PURGATIVE PELLETS cure these troubles by restoring the liver to its normal condition.

BOODLERS' HOPES REVIVE.

McQuade's Release Has Made Their Hearts

The success of ex-Alderman Arthur J. Mc-Quade in shedding his convict garb and stepping from behind prison bars—a free man temporarily, at least—has revived the interest of the public in the boodle cases and given rive to many surmises as to the ultimate fate of the other boodlers-those in prison, in exile and on bail.

McQuade's luck in securing a new trial has kindled into a flame the remaining spark of hope in the breast of ex-Alderman Jachne the first of the '84 Aldermen to obtain employment where there are no lockouts, but where the laborers are securely locked in.

Having failed in the Court of last resort to secure a reversal of the judgment convicting him of bribe-taking last summer, he attempted to regain his liberty on the ground that inaltenable rights granted him by the United States Constitution had been invaded on his trial.

Application for a writ of habeas corpustwas arged before United States Circuit Judge Benedict, who decided that Jachne had been tried by a jury of his peers, and properly convicted, without a violation of any of his constitutional rights, and the writ was dis-constitutional rights, and the writ was dismissed.

There the matter rested, and it looked dark for the ex-jeweler, when the Court of Appeals decided the McQuade case, and its opinion with reference to the selection of jurors gave Jachne's counsel hope that that august and begowned body, the Supreme Court of the United States, might assist him in breaking down the barriers between him and liberty. So an appeal has been taken by Jachne's counsel from the order of Judge Benesitet, dismissing the writ of habeas corpus, and Boodler Jachne may possibly join McQuade and his friends in this city.

Speaking of ex-Alderman John O'Neill, who was his companion in Sing Sing, McQuade said that the old shoemaker was breaking down, and had utterly given up hope of release from confinement since the decision of the Court of Appeals confirming his conviction was handed down.

But "hope springs eternal in the human broast" and since McQuade series (Naill

But "hope springs eternal in the human breast," and since McQuade's release, O'Neill has experienced a delightful dream of liberty, which has perked the old man up considera-which has perked the old man up considerably.

Should Jaehne's appeal to the United States Court be successful, O'Neili knows that his dream will be a blessed reality, for he expects relief from the same quarter.

It is to the men without a country—the enforced sojourners in the dreary Northland—that the news of McQuade's return to his old junkshop carries greatest joy.

To John Keenan, Charley Dempsey, Henry Sayles and William DeLacey the message reads. "Come back to Gotham."

Doughty William Maloney has not yet heard the news, for he is on the Allan line steamer Vancouver returning to Canada from his summer jaunt abroad. The others of the Aldermanic Board of 1884 who remained to stand trial, which the District-Attorney never compelled them to do, are also made glad, and an additional sense of security comes over them as they hear one more nail driven into the coffin of the prose-

Col. Fellows refused to be interviewed this

Col. Fellows refused to be interviewed this morning on the prospect of a new trial for McQuade or the probability of his moving any other of the boodle trials.

A telegram from Montreal states that the exiled boodlers think the District-Attorney friendly to them, but the Colonel would not see the reporter of The Evening World to confirm or deny this allegation of his friend-liness towards Keenan, Maloney and the rest.

It is the general impression that the public It is the general impression that the public has seen the last of the boodle trials under the present public prosecutor's administration, though it is suggested that one of the cases may be called, that an acquittal will probably result, and that Col. Fellows may then announce his inability to convict, owing to the limitations placed upon the prosecution by the Court of Appeals decision, and ask that a nolle prosequibe entered with respect to the other indicted parties.

done, Col. Fellows would prove a friend indeed to the Canadian refugees, for lawyers say that evidence of their flight ought to be sufficient to secure their conviction.

The argument on Jachne's appeal will be had before Justice Miller, of the United States Supreme Court Oct. 22.

IT'S NOW A UNION OFFICE.

A Radical Change in "The Mail and Express " Composing-Room.

For the past four or five years the office of the Mail and Express has been what union printers term a "rat" concern. That is, men have been employed in setting the type for the paper who are not and would not be union printers, though the opportunity has been given them to become such.

To-day a radical change was made by the management, and a force of fifty-two compositors, all members of Typographical Union No. 6 has been taken in. All the non-uniou hands, to whom an extended no-tice had been given, were discharged. Editor Shepard is absent from the city, but one of his assistants said the change was made for business reasons: that the management had long contemplated it, and that the lim-ited room for the work rendered it necessary to employ a force of picked hands. He denied that there were any political reasons.

TWELVE VICIOUS ROUNDS.

NEW YORK, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1888.

They Ended in a Draw on Long Island This Morning. Johnny Brandly, of Brooklyn, and Eddy

Perry, of New York, fought a draw battle of twelve rounds in a barn on Long Island at an early hour this morning. The fight would not have terminated as it did had it not been for an excited sport who yelled "police."

Brandly is twenty years old, stands 5 feet 1 inch and weights 102 pounds. He was seconded by Swipes, the newsboy, and Dot Ryan. This was his first fight.

Perry stands 5 feet 4 inches, weighed 108 pounds and is eighteen years of age. He was waited upon by Billy Gilmartin and Jack Fazin. Johnny Eckhardt was agreed upon by both sides to assist as referee. Sugar Murphy, the fifth ward sporting man, officiated as the timekeeper.

The lads fought for a stake of $200 and a purse of $100 subscribed by the spectators. Skintight gloves were used, and Queensberry rules governed the contest.

At the call of time Brandly was the first to lend, landing his right full on the face. Perry responded by knocking him down with a right-handed pinch on the side of the body. Both men drew blood in this round, and the fight went on most victously from that time. Perry's nose was smashed in the sixth round, and his left arm gave out in the tenth, but he kept up pluckily for two rounds more, when the fight was broken up as stated.

Then again, the child was one that I used to send on errands, and the envelope he caught the boy handing me contained tickets for a matines that I had sent the boy for.

[SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.] CHICAGO, Oct. 6.-The remarkable story of Miss Paul Rochester's experience in Honduras, published here a few days ago, attracted a good deal of attention, fully as much from the peculiar manner in which they were told as for any other reason. The first intimation that she was Mrs. Lily M. Curry came from a Chicago newspaper reporter. He had known Mrs. Curry in the West a good many years ago, and he thought he recognized something familiar in the description of Miss Paul Rochester.

With an Evening World reporter be went to-day to the house in Park Row where the young woman has lived since she came to town

The first question THE EVENING WORLD reporter asked was if Miss Rochester knew Ella Wheeler Wilcox?

She shivered a little at the name, and said she did not and had never even seen her, although her name was, of course, familiar.

Did you not write a book which Mrs.
Wileox praised highly and helped to bring into middle paties?

"I'd like to know what proof he has got to connect me with Mr. Stover or that he alienated my affections. (Here she smiled, showing a row of white teeth.) If the case comes to trial I will go on the stand myself and prove that it is not so." "What was your maiden name?" Why, Paul Rochester, just as I told why, Pani Rochester, just as I told before."

"Isn't your name Lily Curry?"

"The young woman started, caught her breath and stammered: "Oh, no; not at all, Who is Lily Curry?"

"Did you ever hear of Pani Typer?"

Who is Lily Curry?"

"Did you ever hear of Paul Tyner?"

By this time Miss Rochester was half hysterical. She laughed and said: "Never in my life. Who is he?"

"Now," asked the reporter, "isn't it true that yon eloped from New York with a young man of that name?"

"Oh, no. What a fool a girl is to elope. I never eloped with any one. What does all this mean? Who has been telling these stories about me? I am, just as I told you, an orphan girl who went to Honduras for business and pleasure and had some strange experiences there."

And with that she went on about her mine and the rest of her story. Similar questions

And with that she went on about her mine and the rest of her story. Similar questions but in a different way only produced similar answers, and Mrs. Curry declared solemnland repeatedly that she was not Mrs. Curry. The Chicago newspaper man had recognized her, however.

When he tried to recall to ber occasions when he had seen her she pleaded illness and asked to be excused from further question-

Mrs. Curry is remembered here as a bright writer for the Chicago press. Several years ago she came here from Wisconsin, where her writing had attracted the attention of Ella Wneeler Wilcox, who was then living at

We believe that Tammany should have elevated itself to higher position and not have given us a machine ticket, for we cannot consider this ticket otherwise than as a machine ticket. Tammany has just done what Mayor Hewitt wanted it to do and the or jections against machine city government will influence many of the citizens who do not like Mr. Hewitt on account of his peculiar proclivities. The great majority of the Germans undoubtedly would have voted for an independent Democrat if Tanimany would have given us such a one, but we coubt very much whether Mr. Grant will be accepted as a man who can be trusted completely. He is personally very popular among the Germans, but the distrust of Tammany is also very great among them, and it may be that this will decide the choice of a great many Germans in favor of Mr. liewitt. We believe that the result of the local elections is very nucertain under the circumstances, but we are not prepared the say what the result will be.

Wigwam Statesmen Say That It Will Win from Top to Bottom-County Democracy Leaders Don't Agree With Them-A Rather Free Expression of Opinion at the Conference of the Tummany Hall Leaders Last Night.

There is not a politician in the city who is not busy to day expressing his opinion of the ticket nominated last evening by Tammany Hall.

The ticket is discussed pro and con and as might be expected the comments depend a great deal upon the political affiliation of the critics.
